duckpin rollers composed of P. B. Halley (captain), Joe Michaud, Harry Krauss Johnny Baum, William Rider, Krauss, Johnny Baum, William J. B. Carroll, and A. C. Roderick will go to Brockton, Mass., for the purpose of inaugurating a ten-game series down the alleys which will decide the charere to be rolled in Brockton to night, and the deciding five games will be rolled at the Royal alleys, in New Tork avenue, on the night of April 6. Probably no team of bowlers has ever left Washington with a more imp match of duckpins before them than local all-star team enumerated above. The championship series between the two cities has been under consideration for more than six weeks, it having been definitely arranged only after repeated challenges from the Massachusetts town, and then, only after the public-spirited bowlers of this city had secured funds to send a team away and to cover Brockton's $300 side bet.

Accompanying the squad of bowlers who go to Brockton tonight are several Washington rooters, who will be at the very heels of the teams throughout every frame of the two games to be rolled tomorrow evening. Harry Armiger is at the head of the "rooters" aggregation, and, together with the members of the team who are not in actual competition, will cheer Washington's pin spillers on to victory. The entire Washington contingent is due to arrive in Brockton at 9:40 tomorrow morning. The foreneon will probably be spent in recovering from travel fatigue, while several hours' practice on the alleys where the games are to be rolled will be held in the afternoon. for more than six weeks, it having been
